Panel Discussion Topic

'Workforce Development in a Changing Employment Landscape'

Stephen de Gannes graduated from The University of the West Indies as an Electrical Engineer in the field of Electronics and Telecommunications in 1990. In his early career, Stephen worked with the Massy Group and TSTT in several junior managerial positions.

His global business background extends to then working as the country representative for multinational corporation Rockwell Automation, a major US manufacturer of Electrical and Control equipment for Oil and Gas, Manufacturing and Industrial organisations worldwide. With expertise in change management and organisational transformation, he restructured their local division.

His most recent post was at Trinidad Systems Limited as Vice President, Subsidiaries, with responsibility of the document management division and the outsourced payroll company where he led business development towards increased profitability.

Stephen brings a strong foundation of leadership and strategic insight with a keen understanding of transformation during turbulent times. He is eager to work with all stakeholders for the good of the business community and the country in general.
